

Westley Richards EXPLORA Variations.

These three box labels from Dave Luckin are all "Super Magnum" variations, with the lower example clearly explaining the cannellure crimp as an identifier. (The illustration is an over label)

At right are five Explora loadings. The first example has the cannellure mentioned and is headstamped "Super Magnum", as are the second with two stab crimps (from the full 2nd box), and the third with no visible crimp.

The fourth cartridge, shown for comparison, is a regular "Explora" as indicated by the headstamp, loaded with an L.T. #2 bullet.

The cartridge below with its WR Patent bullet is a recent find by Ken Frost. It has the unusual KYNOCH * No.12 BALL * headstamp on a 2 3/4" case as shown in Hoyem Vol.3. p.28 This is also a Super Magnum load, but does the headstamp have any special significance?

Sectioned view of a Super Magnum EXPLORA